1. Introduction:

Customer one of important element in any business organization. The marketer in modern era believes that customer is the backbone of any company. One who consumes a product or service is called customer. According to modern concept of marketing, customers have great importance. The aim of marketing is to meet and satisfy customers' needs and wants because of the changing mind of the customers. Modern customers view the product from the different angles. The post and pre-purchase valuation, the knowledge from the other customers, the knowledge from the other Medias, evaluation of the other substitute products etc, play a vital role in consumer's decision making process. Customers would desire to get the product at an easily acceptable place with maximum outlet. Thus the marketers must study their target customer's wants, perceptions, preferences and buying behavior. Such study will provide clues for developing new products, product features, price channels, and other marketing mix elements. Consumerism and the services offered to customers are important. High consumerism is due to some legislation like consumer protection Act.
1998 and others. High literacy and media plays tremendous important role in consumerism. Buyer behavior is an important factor in marketing. The variations in their behavior are due to some factors of buyer's behavior. If the consumer is not satisfied for anyone of the reasons he will switch to other brands. Customer satisfaction is a term frequently used in marketing. It is a measure of how products and services supplied by a company meet or surpass customer expectation. Customer satisfaction is defined as "the number of customers, or percentage of total customers, whose reported experience with a firm, its products, or its services (ratings) exceeds specified satisfaction goals."

It is seen as a key performance indicator within business and is often part of a Balanced Scorecard. In a competitive marketplace where businesses compete for customers, customer satisfaction is seen as a key differentiator and increasingly has become a key element of business strategy. Within organizations, customer satisfaction ratings can have powerful effects. They focus employees on the importance of fulfilling customers' expectations. Furthermore, when these ratings dip, they warn of problems that can affect sales and profitability. These metrics quantify an important dynamic. When a brand has loyal customers, it gains positive word-of-mouth marketing, which is both free and highly effective. Therefore, it is essential for businesses to effectively manage customer satisfaction. To be able do this, firms need reliable measures of satisfaction. In researching satisfaction, firms generally ask customers whether their product or service has met or exceeded expectations. Thus, expectations are a key factor behind satisfaction. When customers have high expectations and the reality falls short, they will be disappointed and will likely rate their experience as less than satisfying. For this reason, a luxury resort, for example, might receive a lower satisfaction rating than a budget motel - even though its facilities and service would be deemed superior in absolute terms.

The importance of customer satisfaction diminishes when a firm has increased bargaining power. For example, cell phone plan providers, participate in an industry that is an oligopoly, where only a few suppliers of a certain product or service exist. As such, many cell phone plan contracts have a lot of fine print with provisions that they would never get away if there were, say, a hundred cell phone plan providers, because customer satisfaction would be way too low, and customers would easily have the option of leaving for a better contract offer.

Customer satisfaction provides a leading indicator of consumer purchase intentions and loyalty. Customer satisfaction data are among the most frequently collected indicators of market perceptions. Organizations need to retain existing customers while targeting non-customers. Measuring customer satisfaction provides an indication of how successful the organization is at providing products and/or services to the marketplace. Customer satisfaction is an ambiguous and abstract concept and the actual manifestation of the state of satisfaction will vary from person to person and product/service to product/service. The state of satisfaction depends on a number of both psychological and physical variables which correlate with satisfaction behaviors such as return and recommend rate. The level of satisfaction can also vary depending on other options the customer may have and other products against which the customer can compare the organization's products.

Consumers worldwide are going green and this is especially true in the cosmetics market. Over the last few years, growth in the market for cosmetics has been driven by products that use natural or herbal components. There has been a shift in universal trend from synthetic to herbal medicine recently. It is ancient wisdom that plants have therapeutic value and are used to treat various diseases since Neanderthal age. All ancient civilizations in the world are known to use plants for medicinal purposes. Ayurveda and traditional Chinese medicines are well known to the world for their natural ingredients and multiple benefits. Companies are increasingly feeling pressurized to focus on sustainability and reduce their environmental footprints. They are becoming conscious of the ingredients that go into the products that they use and are averse to chemicals that are known to cause side effects. On the supply side, companies are engaging in advanced research of plant-derived peptides, encapsulated actives, active plant stem cells, complex extraction processes, and clinical testing to deliver products that are acceptable to the well-informed customers.

Indians have been traditionally inclined toward natural products for their beauty needs. India has a history and knowledge of using natural products. While consumers in the rest of the world have to be educated about the benefits of natural herbs, this knowledge is well inherited in India from generations. The need is for companies to translate the ancient ayurvedic recipes into modern easy to use formats with superior quality. During the last decade, the herbal beauty care business has emerged as the new growth frontier for beauty business in India. The emphasis has been on the spectacular growth of the herbal and ayurvedic beauty products business. Today, the Indian cosmetics industry has a plethora of herbal cosmetic brands like Forest Essentials, Biotique, Himalaya, Blossom Kochhar, VLCC, Dabur and Lotus; and many more are adding to the list. In addition to a widening base of consumers, color cosmetics and anti-aging and anti-wrinkle creams are expected to be the future drivers of growth in this segment. The market for ayurvedic cosmetics products in India is expected to grow at a rapid pace over the coming decades. The market is only beginning to get populated with ayurvedic brands and it will be a while until it gets too crowded. Brands like Patanjali is also catching up the markets and making it more competitive Ayurvedic manufacturers are investing in research and constantly coming up with new and innovative technology and products that are resulting in better and more effective ayurvedic cosmetics.

4. Conclusion:

Customer satisfaction is the important thing in the marketing concept. Because without satisfying customers a company which cannot sustain in the market forever, not only that customers mind is a changing one. Whatever the customer wants to get from a product that much should be provided by the companies to satisfy customers otherwise customers will stop the buying. In the business arena more and more organizations are able to realize the importance of having good relations with their clients. In this manner many industries are trying to identify ways on how to promote or enhance client relationships. The customer company-relationship is based on a continuum where in both always a share and lost for good relationship occupy the two extremes of the continuum. In an always a share relationship transactions are arms length and discreet. Customers are valuable and at the same time replaceable. On the other hand in a lost for good relationship the probability that the customer will purchase again from the same company is extremely low when the customer decides to terminate the use of a product due to product problems. With these problems the performance of the business are being affected negatively. In order to solve the issue different methods can be used to ensure good client relations. Hence this part of the study will provide literatures focusing on the ways on how to improve client relation. In this study it is examine that most of the customers are satisfied with the brand indulekha and overall satisfaction level is quite high compared to other Brands. Major part of customers expecting more advanced products from indulekha brand and are... brand conscious. Over all the peoples are opined that quality of Indulekha products is good. All the customers are focused mainly on the quality of the product other than cost consideration. The factors influencing purchase decisions are from the advice of friends and relatives mostly.
